A Special August Sale Fine Hudson Seal Fur Coats at Very Low Prices

FALL STYLES

Talk No. 2

Neck Finishes.

There are strong indications that the high collar will have more general acceptance. Practically all New York houses are showing dresses, suits, coats and blouses with high choker collars in novel forms. Many of the collars are upstanding in the back and cut out in front.

Flat collars in fancy shapes, including the sailor and the cape, are likewise used.

Long Sleeves Predominate.

In all garments (except evening gowns which are short). The simpler suits usually have the regulation sleeves, but the more elaborate gowns show intricacy in cut, and some have fullness, either below or above the elbow.

Skirts of Various Forms.

Gowns for afternoon and evening wear have skirts that are intricate in cut, likewise the more elaborate separate skirts. Long tunics are seen, either slightly draped or hanging in straight folds.

The vogue for pleated skirts is quite marked. Knife pleats that start from the belt or yoke. Others are pleated at the sides with panel back and front.

"Done to a Turn" Said She to Her Week-end Visitor.

Yes, and this handsome cake was baked quicker, easier and more uniformly than before.

Baking is a new story entirely with these beautiful "Pyrex" glass dishes. The hottest oven cannot break them.

You can look right through the dish and see the food while it bakes and you needn't touch the dish until the baking is done.

Your food is never burned.

It is baked faster as well as better. You save time and fuel.

Pyrex dishes do not chip, craze nor flake. They do not absorb grease nor odors. They are tough and stand rough handling. They are easy to wash, as food does not stick nor burn on, and every speck is seen at a glance. All this saves time and labor, and insures absolute cleanliness. — (House-furnishing Goods Store, Basement Floor.)

Showing of New Luggage—the Finer Sort.

The new travelling bags and suitcases are full of interesting improvements and happy ideas. They are in size for men and women, some are fitted and others unfitted; many of the former have the fittings in separate removable cases, so they can be left out if more room is needed. Walrus, seal, sole leather, pigskin and calfskin are some of the leathers, and every piece is beautifully finished.

Other articles of luggage for every occasion, from the small fitted bag for the overnight visit to the capacious kit bag for transcontinental travel. Altogether, a most distinguished looking collection, and prices rather lower than usual for goods so fine.—(Third Floor, Front.)

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Care of Shoes. One of the most important things in the proper care of shoes is to have a for mo insert in them when not in use. It is a safe assertion to make that if shoe-trees are used, the life of a shoe is prolonged fifty per cent, and their appearance will be likewise improved. Damp shoes should never be dried suddenly near a hot stove or radiator, as the leather will stiffen and finally crack. Keep the leather soft by applying animal oil to it. The best oil for most leathers is neat's foot oil, which is refined from the fatty contents of the hoof of an animal. When the surface of the leather is nicked, it should be carefully mended by using pastes of vegetable or animal oils, followed by a compound of wax, which should be rubbed to a polish. Shoes should be cleaned and polished daily with a guaranteed shoe paste.

NEGRO LODGE

Objecting to the use of the name "The Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World" by an organization composed of colored people, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America, well known as the "Order of Elks," has filed an equity suit in the United States district court in Philadelphia, for an injunction to restrain the defendant from appropriating that portion of the "Order of Elks," and to restrain its members from wearing or displaying Elks' badges, emblems or insignia. AS A WOMAN SEES IT

Rheta Childe Dorr

"Our beloved New England," said the aristocratic old gentleman who pointed out places of interest from the deck, "is a thing of the past. It has been ruined by immigration. Take this entire country around New Bedford—owned by summer cottagers and foreigners, principally Portuguese."

"They come over here with nothing, the Portuguese, and in a few years time they own a $2,000 house. There are numbers of them on Martha's Vineyard, where I have a cottage. They monopolize the market garden trade, supply the hotels and cottages. Yes, sir, they have taken the trade away from Americans who have lived for generations on the island."

"How do they do it?" some one asked. "Are the Portuguese brighter than the Americans?"

"Certainly not," said the old gentleman. "They are an inferior people, mostly mixed with African blood. But they manage. It is really the women who do it."

"The women?"

"Yes. They hang together somehow and help one another with the children and go in for earning money. 'I mus' help huz,' they say in their jargon. Helping huz seems to be the underlying basis of their morality. When they first arrive they do any kind of work that offers, from domestic service to factory or harvest field labor. They work like stevedores. And, no matter how little they earn, they always put a little of it by. You go to a savings bank in New Bedford on a Saturday afternoon and more than half the people in line will be Portuguese."

"The Portuguese wife never takes a dollar of her husband's money. He too, saves all his surplus, and the first thing you know they have bought a bit of land and a house. After that she stays at home and gardens or raises chickens for profit. The children peddle the stuff from their express wagons. Oh, they're thrifty."

"Why don't American women do something in the way of 'helping huz' I asked casually.

"They do," was the reply. "They keep house and raise their families. That's all a woman should do."

Still it seems to be growing more and more the custom for educated women to cling to their salaried positions, their business or professions after they marry. This aspect of feminism has been sharply criticized in some quarters. But it need not astonish anybody if this new kind of family leaves the other kind in the lurch as the Portuguese have our beloved New Englanders.
